SHERIDAN, WY - Furnirem, a family-led brand that makes handcrafted wood furniture, has outlined its C-shaped side tables. The line includes a solid pine model with two shelves, a slim-fit wood table that slides under a sofa, and two versions that pair a pine tabletop with metal legs.

“Designed to tuck neatly under sofas or chairs, offering easy access to drinks, snacks, books, or devices without cluttering your space,” said Ahmet Dilber, head of design at Furnirem. “Each table is handcrafted with care, allowing the unique grain patterns and variations of real pine wood to shine through.”

The product pages state that the wood models are made entirely from solid pine, with no veneers, MDF or engineered wood. A water-based semi-gloss coating protects the surface and leaves the grain visible. The tables are handcrafted in Turkey and ship from there. The full collection page lists each model side by side.

The dual-shelf model is the piece shown in the accompanying photograph. It has a rectangular tabletop with gently rounded short edges and two built-in wooden shelves for books, plants or small items. Medium and Large versions are both 21.6 inches high and 19.3 inches long, with widths of 7.5 and 9.5 inches. Finish choices are Dark Walnut, Chestnut, Oak and Teak.

A slimmer all-wood version has a rounded tabletop and comes in Medium and Large, both 22 inches high, with diameters of 13.7 and 15.7 inches. That model is offered in eight finishes, adding Walnut, Black, Natural and White to the dual-shelf finishes. Two further models use slim metal legs: one measures 12.6 by 19.7 by 23.6 inches, and a wider version measures 22.5 by 15 by 20.5 inches, in width, depth and height. Both use a solid pine tabletop and the same eight finish options.

A comparison article on the website explains how a C-shaped table differs from a conventional side table that stands beside a sofa, and from a sofa table placed behind a couch. The C-shaped form slides under seating so the tabletop sits close at hand without taking extra floor space. Sizes and finishes are listed on each product page. Custom dimensions for most products can be requested through the company's support team, according to its FAQ.

The FAQ states that most of the company's products are made to order, while some items are kept in stock for faster shipping. Pieces are manufactured in Turkey. The company ships worldwide, including to the United States, Europe and Australia, with carriers such as FedEx, UPS and DHL. Handling is typically one to five business days, and total delivery is listed at about two to ten business days.

Furnirem is run by a second-generation woodworking family. Its brand story describes how the son of a master carpenter left an engineering career to rebuild the family craft around modern, minimalist designs. Customers with questions about sizes, finishes or delivery can use the company's questions page or email the support team.
