

Custom Cabinets 3th PR

Pannello Home Interiors · September 03, 2026

WASHINGTON, D.C. — September 3, 2026 — Pannello Home Interiors, a Washington, D.C.-area interior design and home improvement company, today announced an expansion of its Custom Cabinets and custom closet services, adding new materials, finishes, and design options for homeowners throughout the metropolitan area.

The expanded lineup is designed to give clients more flexibility when planning kitchens, bathrooms, home offices, and other storage-dependent spaces. Custom Cabinets from Pannello Home Interiors are built to fit the exact dimensions of a room, allowing homeowners to move away from standard, off-the-shelf sizing. The company offers a range of wood species, finishes, and hardware options, along with layout planning intended to make better use of available space while keeping the overall design consistent with the rest of the home.

Alongside cabinetry, Pannello Home Interiors continues to grow its closet division, including its Custom Closets Washington DC service line, which focuses on reach-in closet systems for local homeowners. These systems are designed and installed to match the storage needs of individual households, with shelving, drawers, and hanging space configured around how each closet will actually be used.

In addition to cabinetry and closets, the company also provides wallpaper and wall panel installation services. These offerings are positioned as a complementary option for homeowners who are already updating a room's storage and want to coordinate wall finishes at the same time. Wallpaper and wall panels are available in a range of styles and materials, and can be used to update a single accent wall or a full room as part of a broader renovation project. For many clients, combining wall finishes with new cabinetry or closet systems allows a room to be completed in a single project rather than through several separate rounds of work.

According to the company, the expansion reflects continued interest from homeowners in the

Washington, D.C. region for personalized, made-to-measure interior solutions rather than pre-manufactured alternatives. Off-the-shelf cabinetry and closet kits often require homeowners to adjust their space around fixed sizing, while a custom approach is built around the room as it exists. Pannello Home Interiors works directly with clients through an in-home or virtual consultation process, followed by design planning, material selection, and installation.

During the consultation stage, the company reviews the layout of the space, discusses how it will be used day to day, and outlines material and finish options that fit both the homeowner's budget and the style of the home. Once a design is approved, cabinetry and closet components are built to the specified measurements before being installed on site. The same project-based approach applies to wallpaper and wall panel work, which is scheduled alongside cabinetry or closet installation when a homeowner is updating a room as a whole.

Pannello Home Interiors currently serves homeowners across the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, including surrounding communities in Maryland and Virginia. The company notes that project timelines vary depending on the scope of work, the materials selected, and the number of rooms involved, and that specific timelines and pricing are provided to each client following an initial consultation.
