ANNANDALE, VA - Synergy Cabinets has reorganized the countertop section of its website into brand collections, with separate pages for MSI, Cambria and Spectrum quartz and a dedicated granite section. The MSI collection page was most recently updated on October 2, 2026, and the Cambria, Spectrum and granite pages were updated in August 2026.

“Grouping the countertops by brand lets a homeowner browse surfaces the same way they browse cabinet lines, then narrow down to a color,” said Osman Eskioglu, spokesperson for Synergy Cabinets. A full slab can also be viewed next to cabinet samples at the Annandale showroom.

The update applies to homeowners and contractors alike. The full countertop selection is available on the company website, along with a separate page for MSI quartz .

Each color now has its own page. MSI listings describe the look of the slab in detail, such as the gold veining of VelaTaj or the ivory background and interwoven veins of Serataj, and note when MSI also offers a color in a brushed finish. Azurmatt, for example, is described as a quartzite look surface with gray veins and aquamarine undertones, suited to countertops, waterfall islands and accent walls. Other entries cover the Cambria range, from Windsor and Windermere to Brittanicca, and the Spectrum range, including Carefree, Nirvana and Cloud 9.

Granite colors are arranged in groups so that shoppers can compare stones of a similar grade side by side. The listings include familiar stones such as Black Galaxy, Blue Pearl, Colonial White, Steel Gray and Typhoon Bordeaux. Every color page includes a quote request button and a contact link for questions about a specific slab.

The main countertop page also carries a plain language comparison of quartz and granite. It explains that granite is a natural stone that should be resealed every three to five years to resist stains, while quartz is an engineered surface that does not need sealing. According to the MSI product pages, Synergy Cabinets handles templating, fabrication and installation of the slabs it sells.

The countertop pages are linked to the cabinet catalog. It covers lines such as Fabuwood, Waypoint, 21st Century, 1951, Vita, Tribeca, St. Martin, K2 and Timberpeak.

Customers who prefer to start at home can use the company's planning guide , which lists the measurements the design team needs. These include wall to wall dimensions, sink and window positions, ceiling height, gas line and hood locations, and the size and model number of each appliance.

With those details, the Synergy Cabinets design team prepares 2D and 3D renderings and an itemized quote, so customers do not need to draw plans or learn design software. The showroom is in the Little River Shopping Center in Annandale and is open Monday through Saturday.
